How to Solve These Puzzles

Every puzzle in this book is a logic grid puzzle. A short setup tells you which categories are involved, and your job is to work out the one and only arrangement that fits every clue. No guessing is ever needed: each puzzle has a single solution reachable through pure deduction.

Reading the grid

The grid pairs every item in one category against every item in another. Each small square asks a single yes-or-no question: does this pairing hold? Mark an X when a clue rules a pairing out, and a checkmark once you've confirmed one. The moment a pairing is confirmed, X out the rest of that row and column within the same block, since an item can only match one item in each other category.

A simple method

Start with the most concrete clues, meaning direct statements that hand you a pairing outright. Then work the relational clues: either/or statements, comparisons, and exact-position relationships. Each mark you make narrows the others. Keep cross-referencing between blocks, since a deduction in one pair of categories will often unlock another.

Difficulty

This volume is Hard and Expert throughout: puzzles 1 to 50 are Hard, and 51 to 100 are Expert. Expert puzzles lean more heavily on either/or reasoning, exact-position clues, and clues that bundle several facts together, with fewer clues handed to you outright.

Full solutions for every puzzle are at the back of the book.

A Worked Example

Here's a small puzzle solved one step at a time. Three friends, Priya, Owen, and Talia, each chose a different pastry and a different drink.

Clues
1. Priya chose the muffin.
2. The croissant was paired with tea.
3. Owen did not drink coffee.
4. Talia drank cocoa.

Step 1: Place the given.
Clue 1 hands us a direct pairing: Priya chose the muffin. Mark it, and X out the rest of Priya's row and the muffin's column.

Step 2: Another direct pairing.
Clue 2 pairs the croissant with tea. Mark it, and X out the rest of that row and column.

Step 3: Cross-reference.
Clue 4 says Talia drank cocoa, not tea. Since the croissant is already paired with tea, Talia can't be the croissant person, so Talia must have the scone. That leaves the croissant for Owen.

Step 4: Finish by elimination.
Owen now has the croissant and, from Step 2, tea, which also satisfies Clue 3 (Owen didn't drink coffee). The only drink left for Priya is coffee.

Solved below:

	PASTRY			DRINK
	Muffin	Croissant	Scone	Coffee	Tea	Cocoa
Priya	✓	✗	✗	✓	✗	✗
Owen	✗	✓	✗	✗	✓	✗
Talia	✗	✗	✓	✗	✗	✓
	Muffin			✓	✗	✗
	Croissant			✗	✓	✗
	Scone			✗	✗	✓
